FLAT GLASS DISPLAYS

The displays are powdercoated steel displays to support the weight of glass on display and look professional. The design focuses on the glass rather than the display with maximum glass and minimum structure visible to the customers.

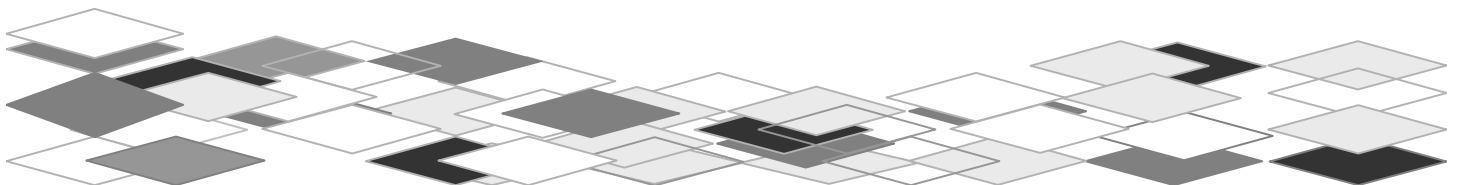

The design means that showroom staff can quickly and easily change the glass panes on display as new products are released and others are discontinued.

Being modular means that display systems can be configured to suit a glass product range or showroom space available. Modularity also means that more banks of glass display can be added at a later date as space or increased range becomes available.

Options for the base of the display include rubber feet, fabricated steel feet, and bases with hidden castors to allow the easy movement and rotation of the display.

The range includes :

- 1-1/2" single mast displays
- 2" single mast displays
- 3" single mast displays
- 1 5/12" double mast displays

IGU HEAT DISPLAYS

The Glass Racking Company supplies IGU heat displays. Customers place their hand on the units which activates a heat source underneath a glass barrier. Over time the glass heats up and transfers heat to the customers hand. By having multiple units, each with a different glass barrier (such as single glaze, standard IGU and Low-E Argon IGU) the customer can easily experience the thermal barrier properties of each type of glass.

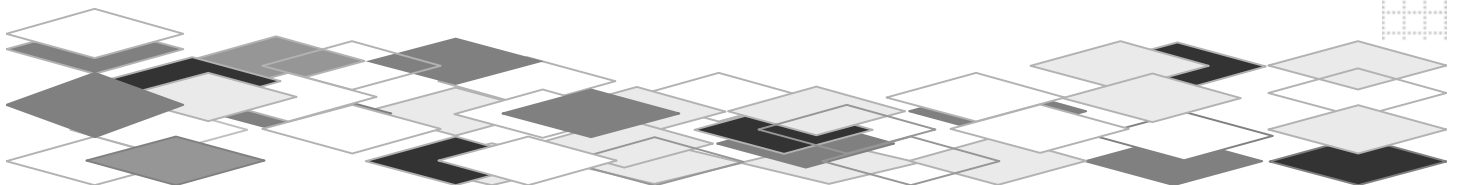

Walk through displays provide an enhanced experience.

BENEFITS

- The Glass Racking Company displays are designed and built by a company and people that understand the needs of the glass industry
- Quality design and build portraying the best image to your customers
- Options for most budgets
- Existing designs and proven and available

OPTIONS

The Glass Racking Company can design tailor made eye-catching displays for large showrooms or conferences.

Displays can be provided with a brochure holder. This is typically built into the display and powdercoated the same colour as the display stand.

The same structure as used to display glass samples can be used to display other heavy and/or fragile sheet product such as stone/granite benchtop samples as shown here.
